Speer, Adolf Hitler's architect of choice, happens to be responsible for one of the boldest architectural and urban oeuvres of modern times. First published in 1985 to an acute and critical reception, Albert Speer: Architecture 1932-1942 is a lucid, wide-ranging study of an important neoclassical architect.

Albert Speer: Architecture 1932-1942 by Leon Krier

In 1985 Léon Krier produced "Albert Speer: Architecture 1932-1942", based on a series of conversations with and documentation provided by Albert Speer, the convicted war criminal, who served as Hitler's chief architect until in 1942 he became Reichsminister of war production.

Albert Speer: Architecture 1932-1942: Krier, Leon, Stern ...

In his introduction to this new edition of Leon Krier's 1985 monograph Albert Speer - Architecture, Robert Stern points out, quite rightly, that Krier has never worked for, nor flirted with any currently existing totalitarian regimes; nor is he grandiose as a designer or urban planner. Rather, he bravely tries to tackle the quandary of whether 'a war criminal can be a great artist'.

On the other hand, Krier has invoked, even deliberately emulated, Heinrich Tessenow, Albert Speer's consistently anti-Nazi teacher (whose opinion of his ex-assistant's architectural achievement was no better than mine) on the need to limit city size and city growth; yet he does not seem to have heeded the lesson which Tessenow, like Ebenezer Howard (his contemporary), insistently repeated ...

Leon Krier (1946-) - Architectural Review

By Leon Krier. Monacelli Press, 2013, 272 pages, $75. Designing the First Axis of Evil Leon Krier would like us to look at the Nazi architecture of Albert Speer in a detached manner. But he starts painting himself into a corner on the very first page. He decries the widespread opinion that Nazi architecture is “worthless, however well-designed.”

A Different Kind of Architectural Drawing: Léon Krier's ...

He has written at length about his architectural hero, Albert Speer, whom he continues to see as the last great hope of classical urbanism. Speer, in Krier’s eyes, was the tragic victim of Nuremberg, incarcerated in Spandau because he was guilty of a passion for Doric columns, while the far more destructive Wernher von Braun was judged useful enough to be whisked to comfortable exile in the US.
