Quotes From Citizen Coke: The Making of Coca-Cola ...

"Halfway into "Citizen Coke," Bartow J. Elmore describes taking a treacherous journey through an Indian jungle in 2010. This vivid, suspenseful scene encapsulates the book's essential argument: That for all its attempts to brand itself as an engine of economic development and a philanthropic force, Coke's thirst for growth has turned it into a parasite on public health and the planet.

How did Coca-Cola build a global empire by selling a low-price concoction of mostly sugar, water, and caffeine? The easy answer is advertising, but the real formula to Coke's success was its strategy, from the start, to offload costs and risks onto suppliers, franchisees, and the government. For most of its history the company owned no bottling plants, water sources, cane- or cornfields.
