Filial Piety | The Borgen Project

But poverty is likewise evil if it is the result of lack of consideration or responsibility (I Timothy 5:8) or lack of diligence (II Thessalonians 3:6-15). Poverty, like prosperity, is neither good nor evil, except as we view it and use it. (4) The problem of poverty cannot be solved simplistically.

Brian Morris explains why politicised religion is at odds with the public mood on contemporary social policy. There are national implications for the persistent influence that permeates our legislatures, a religious presence that now offends three-quarters of the community. It's a political malaise we inherited along with colonisation, largely ignored by media but recently described
