The Moonspinners Mary Stewart

Rediscovering Mary Stewart It must have been about 40 years ago that I first discovered Mary Stewart. At that time I read everything by her that I could get my hands on. I'm happy to see that a new generation is discovering her also. I reread The Moon-Spinners as part of an Enchanted Mega-Buddy Read in a group that I belong to in Goodreads.

Mary Stewart returns to the Aegean for the scene of her latest novel, which is set in Crete. Although the time is the present, the forces that set the story in motion are as ageless as mankind. It was the egret, flying out of the lemon grove that started it.

Mary Stewart -- The Moon-Spinners

The Moon-Spinners by Mary Stewart ~ 1962. This edition: Hodder, 1964. Paperback. 264 pages. My rating: 9/10. I don't know what it is - perhaps the snowy weather and the early dark evenings - but this book completely hit the spot with me a few nights ago, following through to the next day as I surreptitiously raced to finish it off in between my proper occupations.

Review: The Moon-Spinners by Mary Stewart | Leaves & Pages

Of the five Mary Stewart novels I have now read, this is one of my favourites so far and might be a good one to start with if you've never read any of her books. There's also a 1964 Disney film version of The Moonspinners with Hayley Mills, though I haven't seen it and have heard that it's very different to the book.

The Moonspinners Quotes by Mary Stewart

Mary, Lady Stewart (born Mary Florence Elinor Rainbow; 17 September 1916 – 9 May 2014) was a British novelist who developed the romantic mystery genre, featuring smart, adventurous heroines who could hold their own in dangerous situations. She also wrote children's books and poetry, but may be best known for her Merlin series, which straddles the boundary between the historical novel and fantasy.

Mary Stewart (novelist) - Wikipedia

Editorial Reviews "Mary Stewart has moved forward quietly to take the chair of romantic mystery so long held by Daphne du Maurier. . . . Her reputation has grown . . . on the regular appearance of one good book after another, each with a characteristic mixture of eerie memories of past tragedy, star-crossed love, danger and the vivid evocation of exotic landscape."

The Moon-Spinners by Mary Stewart, Paperback | Barnes & Noble®

I read all of Mary Stewart's books when I was a teenager, and I remember being enthralled by the feeling of being in each of the places she described. I visited Crete many years after reading The Moonspinners, and I think my reaction to the countryside and the antiquity sites in particular was shaped by having read Stewart's descriptions.

REVIEW: The Moonspinners by Mary Stewart - Dear Author

Mary Stewart is a brilliant author. I've read the Moonspinners several times, and I'm always hooked from the very first line: "It was the egret, flying out of the lemon-grove, that started it."

Can't fault Mary Stewart on her descriptive verse-like writing. It flows like a river, meandering through the heat of the Cretan mountains and takes the reader on a glorious adventure via the 'heart whole' (MS) heroine (1950's) and her charismatic beau who, in this case is a very robust and mature young man who along with brother and guide, find themselves in the wrong place at the wrong time.
