The Real Doctor Will See

The Real Doctor Will See You Shortly is an incredibly candid inside look at what life as an intern was like for author and doctor Matt McCarthy during his third year of medical school. I must admit that I began this book with the expectation that McCarthy would be one of the many doctors who can't seem to take the time to string two coherent sentences together.

Q. In the hospital recently, a "resident" cared for me. Should I ask for a more experienced doctor? A. Residents are doctors in training. They have graduated from medical school, been awarded an M.D. degree, and now are training to be a particular type of doctor — such as a pediatrician or pediatric specialist, or a type of surgeon.
