The Saffron Gate

The Saffron Gate is set in 1930s Morocco, a time and place I know very little about, but Holeman really makes the setting come alive, from the noise and bustle of the souks in Ma One of the things I like about her books is the way she chooses such interesting settings (19th century Afghanistan in The Moonlit Cage, for example, or British-ruled India in In a Far Country).

The Saffron Gate by Linda Holeman - Goodreads

Linda Holeman is the author of the internationally bestselling historical novels The Linnet Bird, The Moonlit Cage, In a Far Country, and The Saffron Gate, as well as a number of other works of fiction and short fiction. "The Saffron Gate" is an inside look at the culture and times of Marrakech set in the 1930's. To the book's credit, it is an historic romance with an excellent plot and well developed characters. The culture and traditions of the country are the most intriguing aspect of the book; however, "The Saffron Gate" does not live up to Holeman's previous novels, particularly, "In a Far Country."

The Saffron Gate is about love and loneliness, betrayal and redemption, and also about culture shock and assimilation, physical handicap, colonialism, and above all about Morocco, its culture and its peoples. It is worth reading just as a travel book but read it also as a page-turning mystery story with an unusual denouement.
