Hi, I have a toshiba hddr500e04x usb type and can't access it anymore. I used to be able to use it and it became slower and slower at loading, then one day I couldn't access it at all. It's recognized by my computer, the light works on it, however, when it tries to load (which it never does) it freezes up my computer.

I have half a dozen Toshiba portable drives and some of them have served me well for several years. They are reliable and fast -- with the 500GB portable drive I get about 20MB/s read and write speeds (tested on two recent HP laptops, one with Intel and the other with AMD both running Vista), which is half of USB 2.0 high-speed's theoretical max throughput.
